An outbreak of 116 illnesses of Salmonella Bareilly has been linked to a yellowfin tuna product used in sushi. The CDC had and FDA had been investigating the cluster of illnesses for the past few weeks but had not identified a source until April 13 (illnesses had been linked to consuming sushi and sushi-like products). There have been 12 hospitalizations, and no deaths associated with this outbreak. Many of the people who became ill reported eating raw tuna in sushi as “spicy tuna.”

The implicated product, processed and distributed by Moon Marine USA Corporation (also known as MMI) of Cupertino, Calif. is made of tuna back meat, which according to the FDA press release is specifically scraped off the bones and looks like ground product. The company has recalled 58,828 pounds of product.

For more information contact Ben Chapman, benjamin_chapman@ncsu.edu or Doug Powell at dpowell@ksu.edu